

BUILDING YOUR FOUNDING TEAM: THE IMPORTANCE OF THE FOUNDING TEAM

Professor Ethan Mollick
Twitter: @emollick

Causes of Failure in VC-Backed firms

Gorman and Sahlman, "What do VCs do?," JBV, 1989

Balancing a founding team

Noam Wasserman, Founders Dilemmas

Relationships

- 84% of high growth startups have cofounders
 - 50% of those are friends or family
 - 24% are former coworkers

- Friends and family
 - + High levels of trust, warmth, and support
 - Higher rates of failure, relationship at risk
 - Homogeneity lowers innovation

- Strangers
 - + Can build a more focused team
 - + Business relationships don't need to be friends
 - Need to build trust, may be harder to find

Noam Wasserman, Founders Dilemmas . Image by Alyssa L. Miller

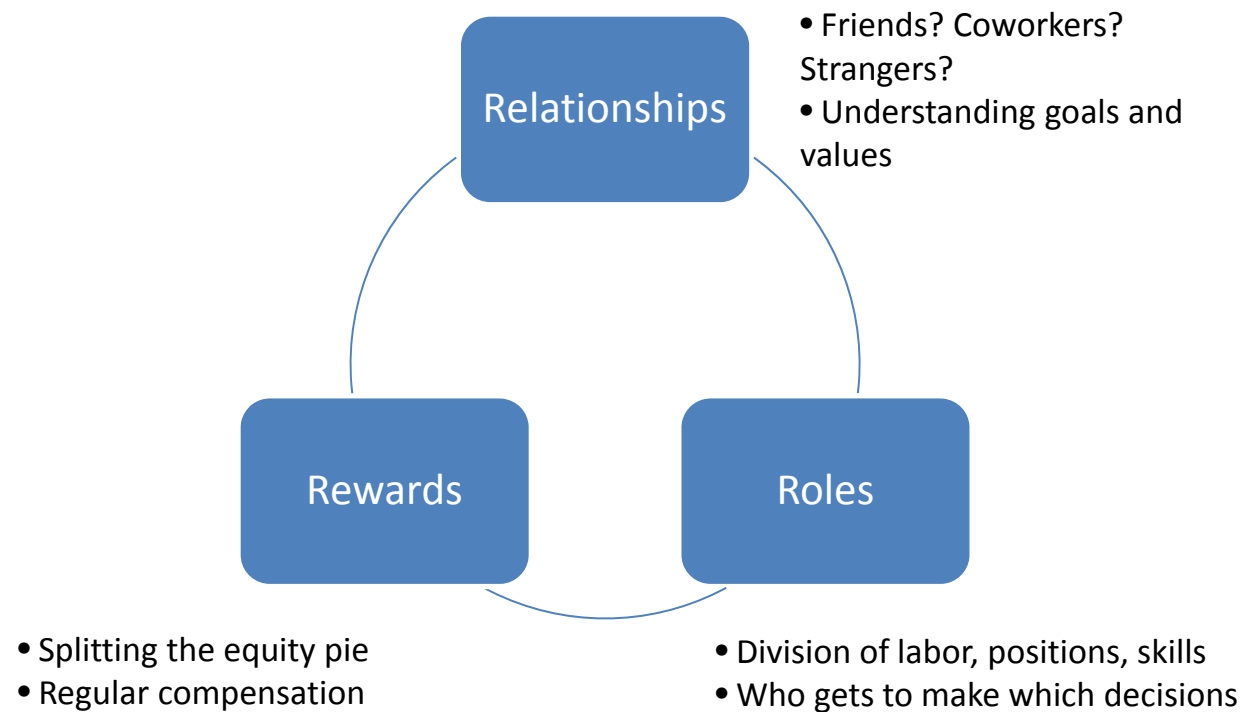

Roles

- You need to have some roles people understand, like CEO
- Clear division of labor is best
 - But you still need to rebalance
- How do you make decisions?
 - Votes?
 - Consensus?
 - Unequal equality?

Rewards

- You need to be able to talk about money
- Leave flexibility and incentives
- Vesting and contingent provisions
- Understand what people really want, money does not need to equal control.

Balancing a founding team

Noam Wasserman, Founders Dilemmas